

Boss: Khong, Yin

Identity :

- General of the Red Imperial Guard
- Red Centurion,
- Scarlett Nightmare, Berserker in Blood, he got so many titles.
- The only one in the name of “General”, instead of commander, because he is also the General of the Greatest Empire.

Experience :

In childhood, Khong had lost his family due to the chaotic war, struggled and didn't know the fate of tomorrow alone.

One day, while stealing some food from a passing army, Khong was discovered. The soldiers kept pursuing him, but he ended up beating them to a bloody pulp.

Looking at this kind who was blood-soaked already, the commander of that army dismounted the horse, took a mooncake from his pocket, and handed it to Khong.

Although Khong didn't understand what holiday it was on that day, and also didn't know the meaning behind that small round cake, it was the first time he understood the meaning of the word "sweetness" in his life.

Decades passed, that commander became the Emperor of the newly unified empire, and that bloodstained young boy became a hero of unification, the general of the Red Imperial Guard—recognized as the strongest force of Seven Imperial Guards.

During the wars, Khong had cooperated with the protagonist, who was the leader of the Black Imperial Guard. Since he didn't like the protagonist's light-hearted personality, and his mouth that never shut, they often argued with each other. However, their corporations were highly successful, and Khong grew to admire the protagonist's abilities of dealing with different situations.

After unification, Khong is still the general of the Red Imperial Guard, since there's no war now, the fighting spirit he once had gradually faded, and replaced by those gruesome moments from previous wars. During the nights, the bloody scenes of carnage on the battlefield sometimes resurface in his mind.

So, he put those two giant axes aside, and began studying the Way of the Sword for seeking peace within.

Ability:

- Represent the color of “Red”
- Red is the color of ultimate bravery and fearlessness.
- Every strike bearing this color carries the weight of immense power, even undefendable, and won't stop till blood shed. That is why Khong could easily beat down those soldiers when he was just a kid.

Weapon:

- Present: A giant sword held with both hands, imbued with the power of Red. Its sweeping and heavy attacks are aimed for breaking through anything.
- Past: Two giant axes, imbued with the power of Red, with the rapid, overwhelming and mighty attack force like a meat grinder.

Personality:

Unsmiling, strict, resilient, caring about lives.

When stole the food, although he could have easily punched the soldiers to death, he wouldn't.

Nowadays, he still trains the army with strength and authority, meanwhile offering the good care of everyone in his team. Looks like he's still that invincible general, but deep inside his mind, he's not anymore.

Personal Goal:

- Guarding the Greatest Empire,
- Following the order of Emperor,
- Try not to kill anymore.

Dialogue before Battle

Khong:

“Still recall this temple?”

“Seven years ago, just before that desert warfare, you and I, as the main commanders, visited here.”

“Prayed for our army to be safe and sound, and successfully win this battle.”

Protagonist:

“Obviously I won’t, I still remember that there was a bit of incense ash fell on my hand, made my hand flinch a second, and accidentally set your hair on fire while you were praying beside me.”

“The Scarlet Nightmare, General of Empire, our invincible leader of the Red Imperial Guard almost went bald, this will be in my memory forever.”

Khong:

"Boy... after all these years, seems like you still don't know how to properly communicate with people."

Protagonist:

“You really should cherish the moments of bantering with me. Otherwise, the only thing coming out from your mouth still probably be 'His Majesty this' and 'His Majesty that.'”

“But...he sends you to capture me? Isn't that too overreacted?”

Khong:

“....His Majesty has ordered, to do whatever I could, and bring you back.”

“I don't want to resort to force. Come back with me now, and I will ensure your safety.”

Protagonist:

“Right....compared with some other lunatics among guard commanders, you are indeed the most reasonable one.”

“But, for my life till now, I dedicated too much for the Imperial Guard, and spent far too little with her.”

“Now, all that remains by my side is her last wish. How could I possibly abandon it, and live like a cold, heartless bastard?”

Khong:

“...I'm sorry for the loss of your sister.”

Protagonist:

“Thank you, Khong. Perhaps among all those people who aimed for my life, you are the only one who truly meant those words.”

“But I will not return.”

Khong:

"...Looks like we've still reached a point that no one wants to face."

Protagonist:

"Yeah...after all, I know just how much the emperor helped you before."

"What happened next, really can't be solved by talking indeed."

Khong:

"Heh, how many times did we hear that when we had disagreements over plans back then?"

Protagonist:

"Three times, but sadly, zero times for any fight, haha."

Khong: (Draws sword)

"You are still that arrogant fool I know."
